

Edward R. Mariano, M.D., M.A.S. (Clinical Research)

Dr. Mariano completed his anesthesiology residency and pediatric anesthesia fellowship at Stanford University Medical Center with emphases on clinical investigation and regional anesthesia for children. Since joining the Department of Anesthesiology at the University of California, San Diego, in 2004, Dr. Mariano founded UCSD's current training program in Regional Anesthesia and serves as Chief of the Regional Anesthesia Division and Acute Pain Medicine. The UCSD Regional Anesthesia Fellowship was the first fellowship in this subspecialty in California recognized by the American Society of Regional Anesthesia. Dr. Mariano is currently an Associate Clinical Professor and recently completed his Masters of Advanced Studies in Clinical Research program supported by a K30 award from the National Institutes of Health.